When I was a child many bad things happened. In my community, I knew some girls who were forced to marry adults at early ages. Some of these adults were their grandparents' age. They grew up knowing that they had a husband waiting for them. It was a shame!

After the independence, things changed a lot. Child abuse by parents and teachers was reduced, but there are still some people abusing children around Mozambique nowadays, especially in rural areas: teachers that still beat their pupils, teachers that harass their female pupils, parents that do not allow their female children to study.

On my first day at school, my teacher checked my school material and he didn't find a ruler in my bag. He beat me so hard that I fainted. I was taken to the local hospital where I recovered. After my recovery, I went to South Africa where I started working when I was still a little boy.
